Meeting Location: In-person meeting

Meeting Summary: The main discussion was about the website's desired features. I was given creative freedom, with the main request being that she can add or delete crafts from the page without going through me, so making sure the client can update the website is the main goal. She wanted a clean and simple layout that displays the available crafts based on category and type. She will send over the photos, details, and prices at her earliest convenience so I can get the initial setup done. The details of the meeting can be found in the design doc, where I went through all the questions, which directed our conversation, and her desires are recorded there.

Meeting changes: My SDLC was good, as the main changes that were requested were that instead of it being one big gallery with filters, each craft category has its own page. Another request was a change in the color palette. I was originally going for more whimsical colors, but a more country and rustic design was desired. Because of this, I did have to alter the wireframes and sitemap to account for the desired changes.
